Preventative assessment is crucial to properly maintain art collections. Regular assessment provides a critical eye for potential damage that may go unseen in everyday life.

The Conservation Center is available to review your corporate, private, or non-profit collection onsite and identify any condition issues present in your pieces. Your account manager is available to provide yearly assessments, prioritize treatments needed, and monitor any changes in condition over time.

ARCHIVE DIGITIZATION AND COLLECTION PRESERVATION

The Conservation Center works with colleges, universities, museums, historical institutions, and corporations on the long-term conservation and digitization of archives and collections.

All reproduction work starts with our professional-level scanning equipment that provides greater safety for the object being scanned. The overhead scanner does not touch the object's surface and captures images using LED light. Overhead scanners also allow for the careful duplication of bound books, as the binding does not need to be pressed onto the flat surface of a conventional scanner. Original documents can then be conserved, housed in mylar, and stored in custom-built clamshell boxes.
